SIS Competitor Analysis

Suma International Services and its position in the Bangladesh Hajj/Umrah travel market

Prepared for internal use

Scope: Bangladesh market only

August 2026

1. Summary

SIS (Suma International Services) is a Dhaka-based travel agency founded in 1997, now close to thirty years in the market. It runs under a four-brand group called Suma Group, which also includes Suma Holidays, Flight24BD, and Suma Overseas (manpower recruitment). SIS holds a government Hajj agency license and operates five offices, one in Dhaka and four spread across Sylhet division.

The official Hajj registry lists SIS as a sole proprietorship with three staff on paper, which sits oddly next to the marketed scale of "100+ Hajj packages" and "90+ Umrah services" across seven service lines. This gap between the formal registration and the public marketing is worth a closer look internally, since it may simply reflect how the agency-network or franchise side of the business is structured, or it may point to a business that is smaller than its website suggests.

Only one competitor could be verified in real depth during this research: Jetway Hajj Group. A handful of other names came up in searches but did not hold up to fact-checking, so they are listed here as leads rather than confirmed rivals.

2. SIS Business Profile

Structure and history

- Founded in 1997, roughly 28 to 29 years of operation.
- Operates as part of Suma Group, alongside Suma Holidays, Flight24BD (air ticketing), and Suma Overseas (manpower recruitment, 20+ years).
- Five physical offices: Dhaka (head office), plus Sylhet, Moulvibazar, Habiganj, and Sunamganj. Four of the five sit inside Sylhet division, which means the company has a real regional presence outside Dhaka, likely tied to the large number of Sylhet-origin pilgrims and expatriates.
- Holds an active Bangladesh government Hajj agency license, number 1237, registered with the Ministry of Religious Affairs Hajj portal.
- The same registry records SIS as a sole proprietorship with only three staff, which does not match the multi-brand, multi-office picture the company presents publicly.

Services and offerings

SIS advertises seven service lines: air ticketing, Hajj services, Umrah services, package tours, visa processing, manpower clearance, and hotel booking. This is a broad, one-stop model rather than a Hajj/Umrah specialist. The homepage counter claims more than 100 Hajj packages and more than 90 Umrah packages or services, though this is a marketing figure rather than an itemised, published catalogue.

Air ticketing arm: Flight24BD

Air ticketing is one of the seven listed service lines, and inside the group it runs through Flight24BD, the same brand covered in the companion Flight24 report. Per the owner's own assessment, this arm already performs at a level close to the top ten air-ticketing agencies in Bangladesh. That internal read is worth taking seriously, since it comes from inside the business rather than from an outside listicle.

It is also worth putting next to what the independent research found: Flight24BD does not appear in either of the two outside "best flight booking site" roundups checked for the companion report. That is not a contradiction so much as two different pictures of the same business, one from inside the operation and one from the outside world's current search and media coverage. Closing that gap between real capability and outside visibility is exactly what the SEO, AEO, and GEO section below is about, and since Flight24BD sits inside the same group as SIS, the fix is likely to benefit both brands together rather than needing two separate efforts.

Specific per-package prices found on the SIS website (a 45-day Hajj package at BDT 590,000; a 23-day package at BDT 750,000; a 20-day package at BDT 1,400,000; and a tiered Umrah pricing structure) did not hold up when checked against the live site and other sources during this research. They may be outdated, promotional, or since revised. These figures should not be quoted externally until reconfirmed directly from current SIS pricing.

3. Competitor List

Rank	Competitor	Verification	Notes
1	Jetway Hajj Group	Verified	Dhaka-based, founded 2009, clear tiered package structure, IATA and HAAB accreditation claimed.
2	Riyadhul Zannah Travels (umrah.com.bd)	Unconfirmed	Markets itself as Bangladesh's most trusted agency with a 30-year track record. Surfaced in search, not independently checked.
3	Amin Travels BD	Unconfirmed	Named in search results only, no verified details available.
4	Hijaz Hajj n Umrah	Unconfirmed	Named in search results only, no verified details available.

A real limitation of this research: the fact-checking process could only build a solid, sourced profile for one competitor, Jetway Hajj Group. The other three names should be treated as a starting list for follow-up, not a settled ranking. A fuller competitor map would need direct outreach, site visits, or a dedicated follow-up search focused only on those three names.

4. Competitor Deep Dive: Jetway Hajj Group

- Dhaka headquarters, founded 2009, so the company markets itself as having 15 to 17 years of experience.
- Holds government Hajj agency license numbers 1451 and 0092, although these two numbers may actually trace back to two separate underlying entities operating under the shared Jetway brand rather than one single license.
- Claims IATA accreditation and HAAB membership.
- Runs four clearly named Hajj package tiers based on accommodation type: A-Tent VIP Shifting, A-Tent VIP Non-Shifting, AC-Tent Shifting, and AC-Tent Non-Shifting.
- Offers Umrah in 7, 10, and 14-day durations, plus seasonal Ramadan and December packages, with named partner hotels close to Al-Haram (Fairmont Makkah Clock Royal Tower, Raffles, Swissotel among them).

Jetway's claim of having guided over 15,000 pilgrims across 25+ countries did not hold up on fact-check and should be treated as an unverified marketing figure rather than an established fact.

5. Market Pricing Benchmark

For the 2026 Hajj season, Bangladesh runs a two-track pricing system:

- Government-run Hajj packages: BDT 467,167, 558,881, and 690,579 across three tiers.
- HAAB-set private-agency packages: BDT 510,000 (affordable), 550,000 (general), and 750,000 (special, includes food and sacrifice).

This gives a market-wide band of roughly BDT 467,000 to 750,000 that both SIS's and its competitors' packages should be checked against. As noted above, SIS's own specific price points found online did not survive verification, so no clean, like-for-like price comparison between SIS and Jetway can be responsibly made from this research alone.

6. Media Buying, SEO, AEO and GEO

This section looks at how SIS and Jetway show up across three related channels: traditional search engine optimisation (SEO), answer engine optimisation (AEO, meaning the direct-answer boxes and voice-assistant results that Google and others pull from a page), and generative engine optimisation (GEO, meaning whether AI chat tools like ChatGPT, Gemini, or Perplexity mention a brand when someone asks a related question).

SEO

Jetway's site is built around clearly separated, keyword-friendly pages for each package tier (A-Tent VIP Shifting, AC-Tent Non-Shifting, and so on) and each Umrah duration (7-day, 10-day, 14-day). That structure is the kind of content Google tends to reward with organic ranking for specific searches like "10 day Umrah package Bangladesh." Nothing equivalent was found on the SIS site during this research: pricing and package detail sit on general service pages rather than individual, search-targeted ones.

AEO

Answer engines pull from pages with clear, direct question-and-answer formatting and structured data markup, things like "How much does Hajj cost from Bangladesh in 2026" answered in a short, direct paragraph. Neither SIS's nor Jetway's site showed clear signs of this kind of structured FAQ content during this research, which means both are likely missing out on this channel, not just SIS.

GEO

This report was itself built using an AI-driven research process that reads dozens of web pages to answer a question, in this case "who are SIS's competitors in Bangladesh." That process found SIS mainly through its own site and government registry listings, and found only one competitor with enough independent, citable content to build a real profile from. If a Bangladeshi pilgrim asked an AI assistant today "which Hajj agency should I use in Sylhet," there is no strong evidence SIS would be named, since there is little independent, structured content about SIS anywhere outside its own website for such a system to draw on.

What this means in practice

- Build individual, named pages for each Hajj and Umrah package, similar to Jetway's structure, so each one can rank for its own search terms.
- Add a clear FAQ section with direct, short answers to common pilgrim questions (cost, duration, visa process, what is included), formatted so search and AI systems can lift them cleanly.
- Periodically test what ChatGPT, Gemini, and similar tools say when asked about Hajj and Umrah agencies in Bangladesh and in Sylhet specifically, and track whether SIS gets named.
- Since Flight24BD sits in the same group, a shared content and SEO effort across SIS and Flight24BD would likely be more efficient than treating the two brands separately.

7. Strengths, Weaknesses, and Gaps

Strengths

- Nearly 30 years in the market, a real advantage in a sector built on trust.
- Active government Hajj license and legitimate accreditation.
- Regional office network in Sylhet division, an area with strong pilgrim and remittance ties.
- Broad service range beyond Hajj and Umrah, including manpower clearance and general ticketing.

Weaknesses and gaps

- Thin, unverified pricing transparency compared with Jetway's clearly tiered and publicly documented packages.
- Registered staff count (three) does not match the marketed scale, which could raise questions with pilgrims doing their own due diligence online.
- No verified data on SIS's social media reach or paid advertising activity from this research, a gap worth closing internally.
- Competitor landscape beyond Jetway is largely unmapped, so SIS's actual market position relative to the full field of Bangladesh Hajj/Umrah agencies is still an open question.

8. Open Questions for Follow-up

1. Who are SIS's real competitors beyond Jetway? A dedicated search pass on Amin Travels, Hijaz Hajj n Umrah, and Riyadhul Zannah Travels would close this gap.
2. What are SIS's actual current Hajj and Umrah prices, and how do they sit against the confirmed 2026 government and HAAB price bands?
3. What does SIS's own digital and social media footprint look like in real numbers, and how does it compare to Jetway's?
4. How does a three-person registered staff count square with a five-office, four-brand, 100+ package operation? Is this an agent network model, or does the registry simply understate real staffing?
5. Given Flight24BD is assessed internally as a top-ten-calibre air-ticketing service but does not show up in outside rankings, what is the fastest way to close that gap, paid media, SEO content, or both?
